Lewisville, Texas (October 6, 2017) –Nabr Network, the leading mobile and web communication system built specifically for community management companies and their associations, announced that they are working with Steward Property Services, Inc. The California-based association management company is using SPS GO to improve communication and boost community engagement in the associations they manage.

“Bringing our local communities together is the reason I chose to get into this business, said Steward President and CEO Jeff Farnsworth. “Nabr Network has truly changed the game when it comes to association websites. ‘Website’ isn’t even the right term for this product. It is truly a communication tool. With our relationship with Nabr, we can offer more transparency and open up communication within the communities we manage.”

“The mobile app helps the members of the community communicate maintenance issues more quickly, which lowers costs for the association and gives the owners the confidence that their concerns are being heard,” Farnsworth continued. “Now our members can browse relevant information while in line at the grocery store, receive important alerts instantly and even request a reservation at the clubhouse or participate in their weekend sports group at the tap of an icon. We are excited to see how our communities will use Nabr Network and look forward to helping our associations use technology to improve their communication.”
